During the hot days of midsummersheep often huddle together with their noses up on the ground or in some other constrained secure them from the attacks of the pester that deposits its eggs upon the neck, should are removed by the teeth of the ani-mal, to allay the itching and are the troublesome bots. The female sheep gadfly aims to deposit her eggs in the neutrils of the sheep, and the animals apparently aware of the effects to follow, try to prevent it. If the eggs are laid they soon hatch, and the young grubs ascend the nostrils, greatly to the distress of the affected sheep. The "worms" attach themselves to the sinuses of the nose, by means of hooks like those of the horse bot, and live upon the mucus secretions of the irritated surface to which they cling. When fally grown the grubs work their way down through the narrow openings, by which through the narrow openings, by which they entered when first hatched, and again cause the sheep much pain. The grubs fall to the ground, and burrowing for a few inches, become chrysalis, which develop into the perfect flies in about two months. The grubs pass from the sheep in early summer, and the flies in about two months. The grubs pass from the sheep in early summer, and the flies come out of the ground from July to September. A daub of tar upon the noss is the best preventive, and should be applied, frequently during the summer months. This may be done by sprinkling meal or salt over the tar in the trough, and the sheep will apply it themselves as they eat the meal. Some farmers plow furrows in the pasture to furnish the sheep a good place to bury their noses. The sheep rub is not fatal, but very disagreeable, and doubtless has a bad effect on the general health of infected sheep. If any one desires to study the grubs he may find them in many of the heads of sheep killed at the shambles.

If anything wrong is found it must be corrected without hesitation.

The management of the hospital should never be made a bone of contention between political parties, much less between factions of either party. This factional fight which has been going on at the Asylum ever since the present administration came into power, should not be tolerated longer by the people. Governor Jackson's policy of putting none but Bourbons on guard in the State institutions is openly denounced by leading Democrate and Republicans alike.
